1. Most (N 50-32, E 13-39) is a city of approximately 24,000 inhabitants. An important mining locality, it is an administrative center for the North Bohemian Brown Coal Mines. Most is the main city of the Most District and is the seat of the District National Committee. Transportation facilities are good. There are streetcars and bus lines within the city and a fast rail line connects Most with Janov via Horni Litvinov. There are also good bus connections between Most, all the villages in Most District, and Prague. Electricity is supplied to the city via long-distance power lines in Prague-Komorany. Most has its own gasworks which were constructed after the long-distance gas lines running from Prague to Most were bombed out in World War II. Some of the streets in Most still have gas lighting. The majority of them are either paved with cobblestones or surfaced with asphalt.
2. Reference is made to the enclosure, sketch of Most. The legend follows.
